

Data-Centric AI for Real-World Reliability

Most AI systems fail not due to algorithmic limits, but due to data misalignment.
This paper presents a framework for iterative dataset refinement — using human feedback, active learning, and distributional shift monitoring — to close the gap between lab accuracy and production reliability.